

THE SAM KADER MEMORIAL FOUNDATION

Honoring Sam Kader's life and legacy by raising awareness of the threat that MRSA infections pose to the vulnerable.

WHO WE ARE

In recent years, there has been a concerning resurgence of Methicillin-Resistant Staphylococcus Aureus (MRSA), a highly virulent and highly contagious bacteria. Many young, healthy people have rapidly fallen ill with overwhelming staphylococcal sepsis that has proven resistant to treatment. One such tragic case is that of Sam Kader, a perfectly healthy and vigorous young man who passed away in 2010 after a valiant two-week struggle with MRSA. Despite the heartbreaking frequency of these cases, the pharmaceutical industry has shown little interest in tackling this frightening bacteria and there has not been a philanthropic organization dedicated to this cause.

This is why we are launching the Sam Kader Memorial Foundation, a New Jersey non-profit organization dedicated to the conquest of MRSA. Led by Sam Kader's family — his mother and father pictured to the left — our foundation is committed to supporting research aimed at eliminating MRSA and community-acquired (CA-MRSA) infections, developing curative treatments for those infected, and educating the public about prevention.

OUR MISSION

The Foundation is dedicated to the support of research specifically directed at the identification and testing of new scientific and clinical initiatives aimed at the treatment and cure of life-threatening MRSA infections, and to the exchange and dissemination of knowledge about MRSA and its control.

We welcome the opportunity for collaboration with organizations and individuals aligned with our mission. If you are interested in partnering with us, please do not hesitate to reach out.
